- Blue Wing Inspections has achieved the InterNACHI COVID-19 continuing education certification to insure we are doing our part to reduce the influence as well as ensuring our own safety.
- Home Inspections are easily conducted within social distancing guidelines as they are solo by design. The industry specific technology also allows for necessary agreements to be e-signed, payments to be made and delivery of the report made without contact. If there are questions after reading the report, a phone call can be made.
- I encourage buying agents to provide Blue Wing Inspections with the CBS Code for the Supra-Key Box. This will eliminate the need for the agent to be physically present simply to provide access.
- The biggest adjustment is going to be with occupied homes. It has always been industry standard the seller or occupant not be present during the inspection. This was to allow the buying side of the sale to freely discuss the inspection results without influence from the seller. It may not be possible for the Seller to leave now so distancing will have to be practiced within the home.
- Occupants will also be required to sign a "hold harmless agreement" releasing Blue Wing Inspections from any liability in regards to COVID-19. A copy of this will be provided with any inspection request.

I look forward to continuing to provide the same high-quality service to my customers as before the influence of COVID-19.

No matter how you view the restrictions imposed by local, state and national government you must agree the spread is almost entirely person to person and doing our part to
